

Wonder: Not Precisely Knowing and Not Precisely Knowing Not

November 7, 2014 A. Mary Kay and Frank Shaw exhibition and gallery talk

MANHATTAN — Kansas State University Department of Art will present the exhibition "Wonder: Not Precisely Knowing and Not Precisely Knowing Not" by artists A. Mary Kay and Frank Shaw in the Mark A. Chapman Gallery, Willard Hall on Kansas State University campus. In addition, the artists will give gallery talks at 4:00 pm on Friday, November 7 in the Chapman Gallery, Willard Hall on Kansas State University campus. Kay's talk is titled "Reflections of Place" and Shaw's talk is titled "What Does This Mean?" A gallery reception for the artists will follow the artist talks. Admission is free and open to the public.

This event is a part of the Kansas State University Department of Art Visiting Artists Series for the 2014–2015 Season.

The Mark A. Chapman Gallery on the first floor of Willard Hall opened in 2005. Cheryl Mellenthin and Mark Chapman funded a complete renovation of the former Willard Hall Gallery, increasing the exhibition space to over 1,400 square feet along with 400 square feet dedicated to exhibition preparation and kitchen facilities. The Department of Art hosts BFA and MFA student exhibitions in the gallery as part of graduation requirements each semester. The technology friendly gallery serves not only exhibition purposes, but also provides a location for an active Visiting Artist lecture program.

Funded in part by KSU SGA Fine Arts Fee
